

Remember: There are many different countries in South America, each with its own style of music.

Make your own panpipes!

Take some drinking straws and cut them into different lengths. Line them up by size and glue them onto a popsicle stick about one inch from the mouth end of the straw. Or, put a ring of modeling clay on each straw about one inch from the end of the straw, and stick them together in a row. To play your panpipes hold them up to your mouth and blow across the tops, moving them back and forth. Be sure to ask for help!

Can you name something that is different about these two instruments?
